Motherhood

Millions of Americans celebrate “Mother’s Day.” This practice dates back to May 9, 1914 when “President Woodrow Wilson signed a joint resolution of Congress recommending that Congress and the executive departments of the Government observe Mother’s Day” (World book Encyclopedia, Vol. 13).

You will note, however that this article bears the title “Motherhood” — it is not entitled “Mother’s Day.” Yes, I strongly believe real “mothers” should be honored. In fact, one of the Ten Commandments was worded thusly: “Honor your father and your mother that your days may be long upon the land which the Lord your God is giving you,” Exodus 20:12. In the New Testament, to the saints at Ephesus, the apostle Paul wrote, saying: “Children, obey your parents in the Lord, for this is right. Honor your father and mother, which is the first commandment with promise,” Ephesians 6:1,2. The same apostle wrote to Timothy, saying “Honor widows that are widows indeed,” and one of the qualifications for a widow “indeed” is that she shall have “brought up children,” I Timothy 5:3,10. Among other things, “widows indeed” are mothers, and they should be honored..

However, I have mixed emotions about setting aside a particular Sunday, and calling it “Mother’s Day.” On the one hand, “the Lord’s Day,” Revelation 1:10, is every first day of the week. As near and dear as good mothers are, biblically speaking, Sunday is still “the Lord’s day.” When we turn “the Lords Day” into another “day,” we could inadvertently neglect to give the Lord the reverence and devotion He both deserves and demands. I have no objection to children honoring their mothers on this day, but I do object to making such an honor an annual event instead of a daily occurrence. Mindful, however, that mothers are generally remembered on “Mother’s Day,” and that such practice is on the minds of millions, I am taking the liberty of writing on “Motherhood” — not just “Mother’s day.” Motherhood was designed by God; Mother’s Day was designed by men.

Mother” is a Bible word. It was first used in Genesis 3:20 which says that “Adam called his wife’s name Eve; because she was the mother of all living.” In fact, the word “Mother” is said to occur 226 times in the Bible. Deborah described herself as “a mother in Israel,” Judges 5:7, an expression reflecting great honor. Yes, as each of us surely recognize, there is something magic in that word “mother,” which stirs up the most tender affections in the human heart.

Biblically speaking, in terms of origin, wifeness should precede motherhood. Eve was first a “wife” and then a mother, Genesis 4:1. In the order set forth in I Timothy 5:14 getting married comes before bearing children. The marriage “bed” is “undefiled,” but any other such co-habitation involves “fornication and adultery,” Hebrews 13:4.

However, the essence of motherhood is in nurturing children, not simply having children. Women, by nature, are endowed with qualifications which fit them for the role of “mother,” and for nurturing. Generally speaking, a mother’s love is more tender and kind; emotionally, she is nearer the child’s world, and her maternal instincts make her more suited for nurturing children. By design, nature, and divine intent a “mother” (whether natural or adoptive) is vastly better equipped to bring “up children,” I Timothy 5:10, than any government agency, day care center, or any community or church-funded baby sitting service. It doesn’t take “a village” to raise children; it takes parents — including both mothers and fathers!

With regards to the perspective of this article, without fear of successful contradiction, we affirm that it is impossible to over emphasize the strength of a mother's influence — whether for good or evil.

The good influence of a mother can be seen in the example of Hannah, the mother of Samuel. Grieving because she was barren, Hannah prayed to the Lord for “a man child,” and she vowed that she would lend him to the Lord as long as he lived — if only the Lord would answer her petitions and give her a child, I Samuel 1:5,10,11,28. In due season the Lord answered her prayers; Samuel was born, and Hannah honored her vow. Samuel became a great tower of influence, serving God as a judge, I Samuel 7:15, prophet, Acts 3:24, and priest, as indicated by his offering sacrifices, I Samuel 10:17,25. Then, too, we think about the mother of Moses who, defying Pharaoh, hid her child for three months, and in the providence of God was hired to “nurse the child” after Pharaoh's daughter took the child as “her son” when she found him in the ark in which he was lovingly placed for his protection, Exodus 2:7-10. Even though Moses, by the Egyptians, was regarded as “the son of Pharaoh's daughter,” Hebrews 11:24, you can be sure that it was his actual mother (Jochebed, Exodus 6:20) who helped instill faith in the heart of Moses. And what a great man Moses turned out to be! Through Moses' leadership, God delivered Israel out of Egypt, Exodus 12:31-51. Through Moses, God gave the Law to Israel, Exodus 20; Deuteronomy 5, and Moses even served as a type of Christ, Deuteronomy 18:15; Acts 3:20-22. Moses was the only person to have God as his Undertaker, Deuteronomy 34:6, and some fifteen centuries after his death he, with Elijah, appeared “talking with Jesus” when Jesus “was transfigured before” Peter, James, and John, Matthew 17:1,2. Moses was truly a great Bible hero, but were it not for a courageous mother named Jochebed there would not have been a faithful lawgiver named Moses. And time and space fail me to tell of Ruth, the grandmother of David, of Lois and Eunice, the grandmother and mother of Timothy, and countless other great mothers who (for the better) changed the course of human history. No wonder W.S. Ross said, “The hand that rocks the cradle rules the world!” No wonder Napoleon said, “The future destiny of the child is always the work of a mother.”

Conversely, the evil influence of a bad mother cannot be over-stated. For example, Ahaziah was Israel's eighth king; he reigned two years over Israel, and “did evil in the sight of the Lord,” He “served Baal and worshipped him, and provoked the Lord God of Israel to anger,” I Kings 22:51-53. But let us not forget that he was the son of Ahab who was married to Jezebel, whose name has become so synonymous with evil that no righteous mother would even consider naming her daughter “Jezebel!” Then, too, we call to mind Herodias who influenced her daughter (who had danced before Herod) to ask Herod to behead John the Baptist and bring his head to her “on a platter,” Mark 6:21-25. Many examples, both good and bad, could be cited, and which serve to buttress the conclusion reached by an unknown writer, namely this: “A bad woman can take herself and 1,000 men (who were good) to hell, and a good woman can take herself and 1,000 men (who were bad) to heaven.” The point is clear — there is simply no way to overstate the influence (for good or bad) of mothers!

We need mothers today—mothers who regard children as precious gifts from God, Psalm 127:1, not unwanted accidents of nature. We need mothers whose “career” is in nurturing and loving their children, women who strive to be “discreet, chaste, homemakers, good, obedient to their own husbands,” Titus 2:4-5, women who recognize the great honor God attaches to motherhood, and who willingly submit their wills to His. Indeed, America's greatest crisis is not a shortage of energy; it is a shortage of mothers (and all that the term “mother” implies).

Conclusion:

We also need husbands who will recognize that the value of a mother's influence in the home is greater than all the "second incomes" in the world. And we need children who will "honor" their mothers, and all that the term "honor" implies. Too many ingrate children take undue advantage of a mother's love, continuing to lean on "mother" long after they reach adulthood, and long after time, hardship, age, and overwork have sapped her energies.

Dear reader, if you have a good mother, consider yourself fortunate. Multitudes are not so lucky. If you have a wife who is a good mother, consider yourself fortunate. Multitudes are not so lucky. Let us look up to mothers who really are mothers, the kind of mothers who meet the Lord's approval and are role models for others to follow. Indeed, let us restore the dignity of true motherhood, let us uphold the sanctity of the home, and let us give honor to those precious women who made possible our very existence. Do it daily, not just one day a year!
